SUBSTITUTE
ORDINANCE

WHEREAS, It is appropriate to remember those who have, through life's dedication and service, enriched and improved the City of Chicago by honoring them in a way where others may be touched by their example; and

WHEREAS, Marion Jean Kennedy Volini did lead by example and enriched the City of Chicago; and

WHEREAS, She was born, raised, and lived her life here in Chicago as she attended Saint Rita parish church and grammar school, Saint Casimir High School, and Mundelein College, married Camillo F. Volini, and together raised five children in the Lakewood-Balmoral neighborhood; and

WHEREAS, Marion represented Saint Ita Church on the Board of Directors of the Edgewater-Uptown Mental Health Center, where the board worked to obtain the much-needed resources to help the patients discharged from state psychiatric hospitals that were residing in Edgewater, and maintained watchful oversight of the landlords housing those former patients; and

WHEREAS, Marion encouraged communities to find their voice and advocate for themselves, which she did when she helped establish and served as president of the Lakewood Balmoral Residents Council block club, and subsequently served as president of the Edgewater Community Council, which helped block clubs form throughout Edgewater to strengthen the community's voice in self-determination and to improve the Community of Edgewater; and

WHEREAS, Marion served as Alderman of the 48th Ward from 1978 until 1987, where she continued advocating for communities to use their voices, in part by creating the 48th Ward Zoning and Land Use Committee to ensure the community's voice in decisions affecting development, and also worked to bring City programs to the Ward and was instrumental in obtaining designation for Edgewater as Chicago's 77th Community area, saving the Broadway Armory for public use, and preserving the Berger Park Mansions; and

WHEREAS, When asked what her lasting impact has been, she responded with: "If I have one legacy it is the empowerment of the people here. We encouraged everyone to raise their voices, be heard, make a difference, and become the leaders of the community. So, that is what I see is what we began and what I think is my lasting legacy"; and

WHEREAS, After leaving office, she continued to advocate on behalf of her community as while in private real estate practice, she often made it her main mission to encourage businesses to come to Edgewater's Andersonville, Bryn Mawr, and Broadway business districts, and she closely worked with her 48th Ward Aldermanic successors Kathy Osterman, Mary Ann Smith, and Harry Osterman to continue the improvement of Edgewater for generations to come; and

WHEREAS, Such a life lived that has exemplified support of the democratic process, lifting up the individual voices to be strengthened in unity, and tireless devotion to her community in Chicago, it is appropriate for her to be honored; now, therefore,
