He battled with kidney failure, kidney transplant and then kidney failure again. He refused to succumb to his illnesses. He survived countless procedures and surgeries. He fought with all his might to stay strong physically, emotionally, and mentally, because he knew he was the fortress and pillar of strength for his family. Despite how many health issues he was facing, he willingly drove his mom, wife, daughters, son, grandsons to work or any appointments, meetings, play dates, grocery shopping trips and/or visits to the extended family. He fought each battle bravely and courageously in the past 20 years just so he could continue to support his family in whatever way he can; and
