Overview of ETIC

1 Background

Japan's local economies have long been struggling with a wide range of problems, including increasingly intense competition resulting from economic globalization, aging populations combined with declining birthrates, and deterioration in the finances of both national and local governments. The problems were exacerbated by the global economic downturn that began in the autumn of 2008, and local economies remain weak despite all efforts to revive them. Overcoming these difficult circumstances for local economies, and relieving anxiety for economic entities, are pressing issues. In these circumstances, the Enterprise Turnaround Initiative Corporation of Japan (ETIC) was established to provide support by revitalizing the corporations that underpin local economies.

2 Organization and Structure

ETIC is a joint-stock corporation established and authorized by the Japanese government to provide support for the revitalization of operations at mid-sized companies, SMEs and other businesses, including large corporations that have revitalization potential but are carrying excessive debt. ETIC's aim is to reinvigorate local economies and help to strengthen the foundations for orderly credit conditions. ETIC is a limited-term organization with a mandate that extends for five years from its establishment in October 2009. Decisions to provide support to businesses are to be made within the first two years of operations (two and a half years for certain businesses with approval from the state minister in charge), and support operations are to conclude within three years of the decision to provide support.

3 Capital

ETIC's paid-in capital comprises investments from the Japanese government and private sector financial institutions, majority of which are channeled through the Deposit Insurance Corporation of Japan (totaling approximately ¥20.1 billion). Funds for ETIC's business operations are procured from the market through government-guaranteed borrowing (upper guarantee limit of ¥3 trillion in the fiscal 2010 budget).
