WHEREAS, She was a Latina Trailblazer whose impact within art, education, and business throughout the City is an ode to the many shattered ceilings and countless rooms she unapologetically took every inch of space in; and

WHEREAS, Myrna was a pioneer who led many dynamic roles such being crowned Queen of the first Chicago Puerto Rican Day Parade in 1966; and

WHEREAS, She began her career working at the West Town Economic Development Corporation as an Economic Development Specialist, where she generated millions in the procurement housing and business development, contributing to the development of Paseo Boricua and Humboldt Park; and

WHEREAS, Additionally, she was a Member of the Choose Chicago Board, Member of the League of Chicago Theaters Board, and Member of the City of Chicago Advisory Council on Cultural Affairs and Special Events; and

WHEREAS, This year, Destinos is dedicated to Myrna and will run it's fifth year from September 14-October 16, 2022, with a total of 13 productions—local productions like "Colectivo El Pozo" and "The Wizards", and international productions like "Pequeños territorios en Reconstrucción"; and

WHEREAS, The creation of the Destinos Festival has led to the largest impact on the cultivation of Chicago Latino theater, not only as a display of Latino theater, but as an incubator beyond the Festival through the establishment of equitable opportunity with investment in new or overlooked theaters; and

WHEREAS, It was a privilege to know her and her neverending passion, love, and energy—she was a true changemaker at a time that was especially difficult and unheard of for Women, muchless, Latinas—as a result, her legacy is deeply woven into Chicago’s past, present, and future; and
